D. Neufeld Collection (Parks Canada)

Black and White Prints - June 6-7, 1990

Information on the Komakuk Beach DEW Line Station was required for the Ivavik National Park management planning process. The range of requirements included the need to conduct a basic assessment of the site's heritage value, a survey of site resources prior to finalizing plans for the decommissioning of the site, and information on land use practices.

To address these information requirements I did some limited historic research on the DEW Line and the Komakuk Beach site in 1988. More detailed site information was gained during a 30 hour stay at the station on 6 and 7 June 1990. During this period I interviewed site staff, toured all parts of the site, studied site documentation available there, and undertook to produce a photo inventory of the station.

This report documents the photo inventory part of my stay at the Station. some 320 photographs documenting the interior and exterior of the station, and the staff, are organized and described below. Notes on aspects of site operation, history, and function are included.
